

Name: Rhys Leverslek
Species: Human
Position: Senior Weapons Officer
Age: 24
DoB: 2 ABY
Location: Pirath
Security Clearance: Low Level
Political Views: Staunch Imperial
Surviving Family: Parents, 1 Brother, 1 Sister
Marital Status: Single

Rhys was born on the world of Pirath to a lower class family of dock workers. His father served as a cargo handler, a role which can be said to be physically demanding and lowly paid. His mother was an administrator at the same facility, overseeing cargo manifests and ensuring the flow of foodstuffs and other goods through the port.

The early years of Rhys' life were mundane, educational facilities were poor and home-schooling with his siblings was the normal day to day routine, which of course included hours of play in and around the dockyards themselves.

At the age of 17 Rhys was able to escape the future that looked to be set for him, having no intention of following his family into the dock industry he submitted an application to a local Imperial recruitment office and was accepted by the Emperor's Hammer strike fleet. He did not have the aptitude to become a pilot, nor the stamina for trooper work but he did have a good knowledge of ships' hardware and weaponry in particular and was trained up as a member of the weapons crew manning ships' weaponry such as the turbolaser batteries.

It is through hard work and perseverance that he ended up being assigned to a gun crew aboard the ISD Hammer, rising to serve as its Senior Weapons Officer overseeing a number of the upper turbolaser batteries.

Rhys has a strong leaning towards the Imperial viewpoint and regards the reestablishment of the Empire as one of his key goals in life which he hopes to help do through keeping the Hammer's weapons fully operational.

In his spare time Rhys enjoys wrestling, taking part in several tournaments onboard the Hammer as well as marksmanship tournaments where he often comes near the top of the onboard rankings. He hopes to eventually climb the ranks to work as a member of the Star Destroyer's bridge crew, possibly as the Chief Weapons Officer overseeing all the onboard batteries and working with the ship's command staff and departmental heads.

He also spends some time in the ship's hangars where he has been persuading members of the ship's fighter wing to help him learn to fly a shuttle.